Advertising Richmond.

In this day and generation of energy and enterprise cities and towns advertise themselves just as merchants do their wares. You can scarcely pick up a newspaper of large circulation that does not have columns of notices setting forth the transcendant beauties, the unequalled attractions, and the incomparable advantages of this, that, and the other place. These announcements are generally accompanied of free water-power or of free sites for new manufacturing enterprises, and the Invitation is extended to all persons interested to send for pamphlets and maps. Towns more than a thousand miles from Richmond have spent here hundreds of dollars in advertising. What have we done in this respect?

Debt-Settlement Prospect-

Among some of our men of affairs who usually take a bright view of things there is fear that those who have undertaken to formulate a plan of settlement of the Virginia debt do not understand the difficulties of the undertaking.

This is not our opinion.

The English bankers and their asso ciates no doubt have read the stenographic report of the conference where Bir EDWARD THORNTON and Mr. BRAITH-WATE represented the Committee of the Council of the Foreign Bondholders and a legislative committee appeared for the people of this State. If they have studied this volume and subsequent legislative documents they know precisely what to expect; but in addition to these sources of information the proposers of the new scheme have been in correspondence with several Virginians whose counsel is everywhere in this State regarded as valuable. With all this light the CLEYELAND-OLCOTT committee have entered upon their enter-prise. No doubt they are acting advisedly. After eight years of costly litigation the foreign bondholders find themselves no nearer the object aimed at than when they

"the committee have been many years pursuing the State of Virginia through American law courts without other effect than perpetual fresh evasions of the duty of receiving coupons for taxes. A separate and independent group here lately took measures with the view of seeing what could be done by a friendly attempt at compromise."

VENUELLE OF MONUMENT TO THE CONFIDENCE.

ORATION BY COLOREL W. GORDON MCCABE.

"For more than seven years the holders of Virginia bonds have refused the terms offered, and have through various agencies expended large sums in fruitless efforts to obtain better terms.

"It has been thus established: 1st, that Virginia has not been able to negotiate successfully with agencies herotofore proposing to represent this debt; and, 2d, that the State will not entertain any proposition unless it is accompanied by a satisfactory guranty that, if accepted, substantially all the bonds will be immediately surrendered.

stantially all the bonds will be immediately surrendered.

"To meet the requirements of the situation, the debt is to be conditionally deposited under an agreement giving a committee power to consummate such a compromise as creditors accept.

"An advisory board will examine such plans of settlement as may be proposed by the creditors (represented by the Bondholders' Committee) and will state their approval and recommendation, or the contrary, of such plan when submitted to them.

"After a plan of settlement has been approved by the board it will be submitted to the bondholders for their acceptance, and when accepted by them, but not otherwise, it will be carried into execu-

To our friends and correspondents in England and at home we beg to call attention of this movement to settle the debt question of Virginia, and would a dvise them to give it their hearty concurrence and active support. Not one dollar of expense is required.

Building-Laws and Inspection-

As Richmond is now far advanced on the coad to metropolitan proportions and as year after year building operations here grow greater and greater, soon it will be worth our while to enquire if the adoption of building- and inspection-laws will not be beneficial. A competent inspector working under wisely-framed ordinances could be of vast service to the property-owners, to the architects, to the contractors, and to the community at large.

Not so very many years ago people generally thought that architects were unnecessary luxuries save in connection with great public buildings. Now it is the exception rather than the rule where they are not employed; or at least where houses are built without architect's drawings. The increasing beauty of the city estabishes the wisdom of this course and justifies the additional expense. Here, as everywhere else, talent directed in a special

A Sad Home-Going from the Unveiling.

So far as the city press can do it all advertising of Richmond is joyfully given free of charge. Few days pass but that in some form or other Richmond's claims to the consideration of investors are not presented through the medium of her own papers. We can recall as of repeated occurrence instances where each of the dailies here has given pages of space to "boom" the city; such matter, too, as in the city whose press is most often presented to us as an example for imitation, would have been charged for at the rate of thirty cents inc. Here it was published gratis and with extraordinary prominence.
